Elite hockey league england

The British Ice Hockey Champions are the winners of the top ice hockey league in the United Kingdom, currently the Elite Ice Hockey League. Previously, the British National League (1954-60), the Premier Division (1983-96) and the Ice Hockey Superleague (1996-2003) were the top leagues. History Before the british National League was founded, England and Scotland each had their own competitions. The English League was founded in 1931, and the Scottish National League was founded a year later. Most English league clubs left the English League in 1935 and led the dissolution of the English League at the end of the 1935–36 season. The Scottish National League and the English National League remained in place until 1954. This year it was decided to merge the two leagues into one. [2] In its first season, the new competition initially had twelve teams, four from England and eight from Scotland. The Dunfermline Vikings retired from the league at the beginning of 1955 and at the end of the season six of the seven remaining Scottish teams withdrew and left the league with five members. After the closure of the Haringay Arena in 1958, this share fell to four, but rose again to five in 1959 after the admission of Streatham. After the 1959–60 season, the league was dissolved. After the closure of the British National League, there was no league competition in the UK for the next six years. Instead, clubs, some of which did not have a home run, took part in ice rink tournaments. The Northern League was founded in 1966. This league consisted of teams from Scotland and north-east England and was the only league in the country for four years. The Southern League was founded in 1970 and split into the English League North and Inter-City League in 1978. The British Hockey League was founded in 1982, and the Premier Division was formed a season later. Since then, there has been a British league, although there have been three different organisations and the number of team-bound teams varied from 12 in 1993/94, 1994/95 and 2017/18 to five in 2002/03. The current Elite Ice Hockey League was founded in 2003. For 42 seasons there has been a competition in the British league and 16 teams have won the championship. The most successful club are the Sheffield Steelers, who have won the championship nine times, followed by the Cardiff Devils (6), the Belfast Giants and the now defunct Durham Wasps (5 each) and the Coventry Blaze (4). The Nottingham Panthers, the only club to have played in all 42 seasons,[2] have won the title twice (in addition, Nottingham was twice English champion before the British National League was founded). The Durham Wasps, Murrayfield Racers, Cardiff Devils, Sheffield Steelers and Coventry Blaze are the only teams to win a title Have.
